

June 2009

Summer is here! The school year is coming to a close and summer holidays are upon us. The kids are excited and have a lot of positive energy this month as their summer is about to begin. They talk of plans for the summer, vacations, parties and other fun activities such as camp. The year end is a good time to focus their positive energy on putting together a year end drive for collecting cell phones.

Have the art classes make banners to put up around the school. Write something for the school newsletter and make it a contest. Kids seem more motivated if there is a reward afterwards.

Have each class choose something they would like to have one of the teachers do if their class end up bringing in the most phones. Have the teachers and class agree on something they both think is fair (and entertaining) for the teacher to do if they win.

Some ideas for the teachers are:

1. Kiss a pig (you could bring in a small pig)
2. Sit over a dunk tank and have the students throw balls at the bulls eye
3. Shave their head

Have the school organize a year end finale assembly to announce the winner and have the teacher do whatever task they agreed on.

Have a good summer!
